Dear Sir or Madam,

I believe that the only reasonable solution in the Microsoft civil suit is to determine total monetary damages (determined by the court), who can draw on the funds and how much, and a length of time these moneys will be distributed. The money damages should be placed in a private fund and administered by an oversight board selected by the courts with one person selected by Microsoft.

Entities drawing on this fund can use the funds for computer related purchases only (as determined by the oversight board) and are allowed to choose ANY vendor, Microsoft and non-Microsoft products.

Thank you
